Synopsis:

Nick Rezkel lost his PI license in a case that went sideways. Turned out catching the killer wasn't enough. Now he's on the Alaska Pipeline, working seven tens out in the minus 70 wind chill. The pay is exorbitant and extreme individuals all about are an amusement, until the boss threatens to fire him for obscure reasons and the crane operator nearly takes off his leg, smiling with malice. Looks like the past's gotten entangled with a brand new real estate and construction scam. Yet, there are compensations. Nick finds a new girlfriend with a quick tongue and a killer body. Life feels sweet as they head off to the raging after-work party scene. Then everything gets serious. He finds a man on the floor, blood dissolving cocaine spilled on the body. The state troopers arrive utterly convinced Nick stabbed the guy. It's strictly up to him to get away and clear himself.

Author bio:

Richard Anderson is a former ditch digger, a former cab driver, a former phone booth cleaner and a former game developer. He also did computer stuff in Indonesia for a couple years and has 100,000 miles on his thumb. These days he's a database developer in a town to the left of Berkeley, with a writerly wife, three cats and a nighttime crime writing habit
